ABOUT ME

Jennifer is a genuine, out-of-the-box thinker who is driven to get to "yes." She helps companies reach goals by aligning their mission and values with appropriate governance, processes, transparency and communication, and is adept at developing teams to acclimatize quickly to new approaches, direction, and regulatory standards. She led one of the most complicated industry players, an electric and natural gas utility, into top quartile safety performance and early adoption of best-in-class EHS practice, standards, and processes resulting in ongoing business performance improvement. Jennifer recently joined the largest national non-emergency medical transportation and home healthcare company as a VP and is replicating her utility industry success. Jennifer is a consensus builder who improved operating metrics, regulatory recovery, and risk transfer at a Fortune 300, $11B company and is embarking on the same trajectory at her current employer, a rapidly growing $2.2B company. Committed to accountability, Jennifer has created and implemented performance reporting, including formulating and shaping KPI scorecards to right-size the work to resources needed, shift high-priority work in-house, and diversify suppliers. Jennifer's 20+ years of legal experience has made her versed in identifying, transferring, mitigating and managing risk. Skilled at crisis management, she knows how to protect company brand while strengthening relationships with regulators, customers, and the community.

As co-president of a decades-old non-profit, Jennifer nearly doubled the number of benefactors and executive committee members, driving a three-fold revenue increase which allowed for first-time funding of multiple scholarships for diverse students. Through her position with the City and County of Denver Board of Public Health and Environment, Jennifer helped promulgate a resolution declaring racism a public health crisis, bringing social determinants of health front and center. As a minority, first-generation American and first college graduate in her family, Jennifer approaches issues with a lens toward diversity, inclusion, equity, social justice and environmental stewardship.
